

CALL FOR PAPERS

International Conference

Romani Women: Voices, Memory and Remembrance

Florence (Italy), 29-30 May 2026

The University of Florence will host the International Conference Romani Women: Voices, Memory and Remembrance, conceived as a dialogue among scholars, activists, and practitioners dedicated to amplifying the narratives, experiences, and agency of Romani women (Romnja) across Europe. By placing Romani women at the centre of historical, political, and social analysis, this conference seeks to explore how they actively contribute to memory-making, public discourse, activism, memorialization processes, and inclusive democratic participation. Particular attention will be given to their role within the remembrance of the Roma genocide and contemporary struggles for recognition, equality, and political visibility.

Beyond these aims, the conference intends to advance critical reflection on the epistemologies generated by Romani women and to consider how their cultural practices, narrative forms, and self-representations reshape both academic and public understandings of Roma histories and present realities. By bringing together interdisciplinary perspectives, the event promotes methodological innovation in the study of Romnja narratives, encouraging approaches grounded in oral history, participatory research, artistic practices, and community-based documentation.

This event, therefore, aims to foster dialogue among scholars, activists, artists, educators, and community leaders, acknowledging the fundamental role of Romnja in shaping collective memory, resisting discrimination, and challenging dominant narratives. In doing so, the conference aspires to strengthen collaborative networks between academic institutions, cultural organisations, and Roma communities, contributing to long-term initiatives in remembrance, empowerment, and the preservation of Romani women's cultural heritage.

We welcome proposals addressing, but not limited to, the following topics of interest:

1. Romani women and the remembrance of Roma genocide: analyses of historical experiences, testimonies, and the role of Romnja in contemporary memory practices related to the Sinti and Roma genocide.
2. Narratives, storytelling and intergenerational memory: studies on oral histories, autobiographical accounts, and cultural narratives through which Romani women shape and transmit collective memory.
3. Political participation, leadership, and activism: research on the civic engagement, advocacy efforts, and forms of resistance developed by Romnja at local, national, or European levels.
4. Intersectionality and socio-political representations: contributions examining gendered antigypsyism, multiple discrimination, and feminist or decolonial approaches to understanding Romnja agency.
5. Education, inclusion, and policy perspectives: analyses addressing educational barriers, community-based empowerment, and the impact of inclusion policies or institutional practices on the lives of Romani women.
6. Artistic, cultural, and digital expression: studies exploring creative production - arts, performances, literature, digital storytelling – and its role in visibility, cultural resistance, and heritage-making.

An abstract in English (maximum 500 words) and a short 1-page CV must be sent to givo.sppi@unipd.it by February 1, 2026.

The authors of the selected abstracts shall be provided with one night's complimentary accommodation arranged by the organisers and reimbursement for travel expenses.

With the support of the CERV project "GIVO - Give voice to our memories", co-funded by the European Union.
